Hockey theme on thin ice

CBC may ditch beloved tune

Hockey fans called a major penalty against the CBC yesterday as the national broadcaster seemed prepared to do away with the Hockey Night in Canada theme — a beloved 40-year-old musical institution as familiar to Canadians as the country's national anthem.

"CBC won't get away with that," said Mary Quigley of Cape Breton, N.S., outside the Hockey Hall of Fame in Toronto. "The Canadian people won't let them get away with that."

Websites carrying news of the possible separation of the hockey anthem from Hockey Night in Canada broadcasts quickly got e-mails from people passionate about the theme.

Online petitions were launched. Some fans of the song shared anecdotes.

"In 1990 my son stood up in a crowded restaurant in Tokyo, Japan and 'sang' the Hockey Night in Canada theme," commented a reader on the CBC website carrying the story. "Before he had completed four bars he was joined by various other Canadians he did not know."

Reports that the theme might be benched next year came when the agency that represents the song's composer said yesterday that the CBC will no longer use the familiar hockey anthem.

But the head of CBC Sports says the song hasn't been shelved yet.

"Our negotiations continue and if we can do a deal for the theme that's reasonable for both sides, we'll do it," said CBC Sports executive director Scott Moore in an interview. "It's a great theme. If we can't, then we have an alternate direction that we're excited about and that I think will create controversy and create excitement amongst Canadians."

"But certainly our first choice would be to keep the theme as it is."

Water quality not a concern as 6 of 11 receive blue flags

Blue Flag designation

» If a beach meets all the standards and is swimmable for at least 80 per cent of the swimming season — which lasts about 90 days in Toronto between early June and Labour Day — it's given a blue flag.

With predictions for a scorching summer, fear not if your backyard is bereft of a place to swim — Toronto's beaches have been declared fit for the season.

The opening of the city's 11 lifeguarded beaches yesterday comes just in time, as this weekend promises to be the start of what meteorologists predict will be a warmer than usual June/July/August. According to Environment Canada, temperatures across the GTA are expected to reach just above 30 degrees today, tomorrow and Sunday.

And if you're skeptical about the water quality off Toronto's beaches, don't be. Despite the reputation, six of the city's lifeguarded beaches have again received the international Blue Flag designation, handed out in Ontario by Environmental Defence, a not for profit organization that since 2003 has used the international Blue Flag program administered by the Copenhagen-based Foundation for Environmental Education, to rate Toronto's beaches.

"Toronto's beaches stack up very well," says Sarah Winterton, who oversees the Blue Flag program. "In studying the water quality for these beaches the ones that have the blue flags have consistently had good water quality."

Doctor gets 7 years in death of wife

SENTENCING An elderly Thornhill gynecologist was released on bail last night — hours after he was sentenced to seven years in prison for fatally injecting his wife with a lethal combination of painkillers.

Dr. Joseph Roncaioli, 72, was sentenced yesterday morning to the prison term for manslaughter for the death of his wife Ibi, who was found dead in the family's Centre Street mansion in Vaughan on July 20, 2003.

Immediately after the sentence, the doctor's lawyer, J. David Hobson, filed a motion to have him released on bail, pending an appeal.

Police volunteer guilty in child porn case

A jury in a Newmarket courtroom found Toronto police volunteer Brian Brown guilty yesterday of three charges of possessing and distributing child pornography on the Internet.

Brown, 45, a Richmond Hill computer expert with no criminal record, had volunteered to help Toronto police develop software to track down people using and distributing child pornography on the Internet. But the jury did not accept his explanation that a hacker placed more than 1,100 images of child porn on his computer, found in a police search of Brown's home on April 4, 2006.

No date was set for sentencing. Brown remains free on bail. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Call to bring Khadr home

A Canadian parliamentary committee investigating the imprisonment of Omar Khadr at Guantanamo Bay is looking at whether he could be brought home on a court order that would limit his freedom.

Committee MPs preparing a report for the government have received information about Section 810.01 of the Criminal Code that permits a provincial court judge to impose sanctions to reduce a threat of someone released into the community.

The rarely used section was used for the first time last year when charges were stayed against six of the 18 suspects in the alleged "homegrown terrorism" plot in Toronto.

The research about the peace bonds was given to the committee along with recent reports from Canadian officials that describe Khadr, 21, as "salvageable."

Former CEO jailed

Businessman guilty of $8M fraud

A group of fleeced investors turned up at a Toronto court to share the havoc and ruin a former CEO brought into their lives.

"This has truly been devastating and has affected my family relationships," said Karen Garscadden, reading a victim impact statement in Old City Hall court yesterday, prior to sentencing for Adam Spencer, who defrauded more than 80 people for a reported $8 million.

Yesterday Spencer pleaded guilty to one count of defrauding the public, one count of fraud over $5,000 and failing to comply with recognizance. He was sentenced to six years for each charge he plead to, to be served concurrently.

Detroit Eatery puts Wings on menu

If you're a Red Wings fan, the Detroit Eatery on the Danforth was the place to watch the Stanley Cup Wednesday night.

"Every Wings fan in the city was in here; and trust me, there are a lot of us. There was standing room only," said Chris Antaras, whose family owns the Detroit Eatery on Danforth Ave., near Chester Ave.

"I was still recovering from the triple overtime game. I'm just glad it's over — that's all I can say. I couldn't take much more."

The family owned diner is known for its excessive Wings-memorabilia decor and die-hard fan of an owner. The now 39-year-old Antaras fell in love with the Detroit Red Wings at 15. Even though he was born and raised in Toronto, a lot of his family lives in Detroit.

Yesterday morning, many of the late-night revellers, came back for some morning coffee and eggs. "It was crazy in here," said Kimon Korkodilos, 43. "Every time they scored a goal, the place went nuts."

Dion vows to block proposal on unborn victims

Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Rona Ambrose, one of the most socially progressive members of Prime Minister Stephen Harper's government, is throwing her support behind a controversial private member's bid to legally recognize the rights of the unborn.

Ambrose made a rare step into public debate yesterday to tell reporters that she backs the so-called Unborn Victims of Crime Act, or C-484, a proposed bill put forward by Conservative MP Ken Epp, that critics are calling a backdoor method to give the fetus rights and make abortions more difficult to obtain in Canada.

Meanwhile, Liberal Leader Stéphane Dion vowed at a news conference that his party would do all it could to block C-484.

"I want to give my word to all the women of Canada that the Liberal Party of Canada is against to reopen (reopening) women's right to decide," Dion said. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Worker program unveiled

Premier Dalton McGuinty has unveiled his long-promised "second career" training program but General Motors workers losing their jobs next year are out of luck until they're out on the street.

"The program will obviously be well up and running then and will be available to those workers," McGuinty said yesterday as he detailed the three-year, $355 million effort.

However, the government might offer other assistance sooner as GM prepares to close its Oshawa pickup truck plant, which now employs 2,600, because of sagging sales in the U.S.

Waitress cut her hair for cancer fundraiser

When she took part in a local fundraiser for cancer research, all Stacey Fearnall thought she had to lose was a full head of hair.

Instead, the 36-year-old waitress at Nathaniel's restaurant in Owen Sound, who raised more than $2,700 for the charity Cops for Cancer in exchange for her locks, was laid off when she showed up for work earlier this week with a shorn head.

The mother of two was told by her boss to go home after she refused to wear a wig.

JAMES MASTERS/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stacey Fearnall, of Owen Sound, says she can't believe she was laid off after she had her head shaved for a cancer fundraiser.

Nathaniel's owner and chef Dan Hilliard said the restaurant has certain standards, requiring employees to keep their hair at a reasonable length. Fearnall is still on the payroll and she can return to work once she grows her hair back, he said.

Mohammed tells judge he wants to be a 'martyr'

Khalid Sheikh Mohammed said he would welcome becoming a "martyr" after a judge warned yesterday that he faces the death penalty for his confessed role as mastermind of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Mohammed sang verses from the Qur'an, rejected his lawyers and told Judge Ralph Kohlmann that he wants to represent himself at the war crimes trial. The judge warned that he faces execution if convicted of organizing the 2001 attacks on the United States.

But the former No. 3 leader of al-Qaida was insistent.

"Yes, this is what I wish, to be a martyr for a long time," Mohammed declared. "I will, God willing, have this, by you." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Clinton not seeking VP spot, endorses Obama

Hillary Clinton yesterday disavowed efforts by some supporters who have urged Barack Obama to choose her as his running mate. The push-back came a day after the former first lady said she would end her quest for the Democratic nomination and endorse the Illinois senator.

Clinton was planning an event in Washington tomorrow to thank supporters and urge them to back Obama's candidacy. But as she was bowing out of the race, supporters were ramping up a campaign to pressure him to put her on the ticket in the No. 2 spot. Resolutions for a green year

A simple way to go green is to stop buying books — borrow them from the public library instead.

Make a difference with lifestyle changes

By MARTY YORK
Metro Toronto

It's all so simple, really, this concept of going green. The objective is to live happy, healthy lives and save the planet.

By now, we're all familiar with what we need to do in general.

Reuse, reduce, recycle. Buy less. Burn less oil. Pollute less. Eat better. Plan better. Think better.

And so on and so on.

But what can we do specifically to go green throughout the year and help achieve our objectives?

Below are some suggestions from environmental experts:

DRIVE LESS: Walk or bike whenever possible. Take public transit. Carpool. And, if you absolutely must drive, use an energy-efficient vehicle or convert to alternative fuels like ethanol or biodiesel.

USE ENERGY-EFFICIENT APPLIANCES: You should also only run your dishwasher when it's fully loaded. And don't forget energy-efficient lightbulbs.

TAKE SHORTER SHOWERS: Or baths. Use less hot water.

USE LESS PAPER: The third largest industrial emitter of global warming pollution is the pulp and paper industry. Use paper made from post-consumer waste, and, of course, recycle your newspapers.

One way to go green is to walk, bike, or take public transit to work.

RID YOURSELF OF JUNK MAIL: Tell whoever's mailing you this stuff to stop and to not sell, exchange or give your information to other commercial interests.

REDUCE PRINTER USAGE: Don't toss old faxes, reports and letters. Put them in your printer face up and print on their blank side.

CLOSE YOUR DOORS: This will reduce the need to turn up the heat or air conditioning. Don't set your thermostat too high when it's cold or too low when it's warm.

BAG LESS: Don't use specially bought plastic bags. Line your kitchen garbage container with newspaper. (Not Metro, hehe.) When you shop, bring your own tote bag and reject plastic bags stores offer.

USE THE SUN: Go back to clotheslines to dry your clothes instead of those gas-guzzling and electric dryers.

TURN OFF COMPUTERS: And pull chargers out of the wall when not using them. Maximize your CPU settings, like the sleep mode, to reduce energy use.

USE THE PUBLIC LIBRARY: Stop buying so many books.

SAY NO TO STYROFOAM: If it's sold in Styrofoam, just don't buy it. Styrofoam isn't recycled; it never biodegrades.

Turn your mobile phone into a tree.

We give where we live. Bring any mobile phone in to your local TELUS store for recycling, and we'll plant a tree. Working in partnership with Tree Canada, thousands of our team members will plant trees in communities across the country on our annual TELUS Day of Service. Last year, our Return & Recycle Program collected over 40,000 phones. Let's make those numbers grow. For more information please visit telus.com/recycling Collect and use your rainwater for your lawn and plants.

water-saving tips

» Use a broom rather than a water hose to clean walkways, driveways and sidewalks.
» Collect and use your rainwater for your lawn and plants. It's free and better for your plants.
» Avoid cleaners containing phosphates. When they get into rivers and lakes they cause algae blooms, robbing the water of oxygen and ultimately killing aquatic life.
» Fix that leaking hose and dripping nozzle. It will help keep your shoes and shirt dry and save water.
» Keep the septic system working smoothly! Pour 250 ml baking soda down any toilet or drain once a week. Baking soda creates a favourable pH environment for optimal bacterial action.
» Install water-saving showerheads.
» Don't run the water when you brush teeth, shave, wash dishes, or clean vegetables.

Dedicated to cleaning up the coastline

Litter 'everywhere': Ocean Net founder

By JON TATTRIE
for Metro Toronto

Robert O'Brien, founder of Ocean Net.

Sailing home to Newfoundland after 35 years in Toronto, Robert O'Brien was struck by the beauty of the coastal landscape — and the filthy mess wrapped round it like a noose.

It was 1997, and O'Brien was sailing in a flotilla to commemorate the 500th anniversary of John Cabot's arrival in North America, but what he was seeing was a shocking display of what has happened to the waters since then.

"It's everywhere, ocean litter. It's frightening," the self-made businessman says, adding that most of it comes off boats — about 80 per cent from fishing boats.

He was disgusted — and inspired to found Ocean Net, a grassroots organization dedicated to cleaning up coastlines through volunteer work. Today, it boasts more than 25,000 members in 2,000 communities across Newfoundland who take to the shore at least once a year, garbage bags in hand.

"Sometimes we do it twice a year, with all the litter coming off the ocean. You wonder where it comes from. Where did that mattress come from?" he muses about one particularly strange find. "It was a single mattress. Maybe someone had it on a boat.

"Someone has to take stewardship of the environment," he explains. "You're only one person, but you know, even if you recycled or composted, you reduce your human footprint. If we all did that, we could reduce our footprint by 75 per cent."

He quotes his friend and fellow Canadian Environment Award honoree Jon Lien: "God help me if something happened to the environment while I was on watch."

O'Brien, honoured with a Hometown Hero environmental award last year, points to Ocean Net Day as a proud achievement. Held in Newfoundland the third Friday of September, it focuses attention on beaches — and the perennial need to clean them.

"It's exciting to be recognized," he says of the Canadian Environment Award. "It's exhausting, doing this. When you receive any kind of recognition or a pat on the back, you say, 'Well, it's not in vain. There is a God out there!'"

"Our strength is our people," says Mary Coxworthy, Ocean Net's executive director. "People here have pride in their local beaches, and all we have to do is steer them in the right direction. We're making everyone a steward for the shorelines of Newfoundland and Labrador."

Saving coral reefs takes global importance for Ocean's Day

First proposed by Canada at the 1992 UN Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro, in many countries Ocean's Day — which is on Sunday — is essentially an annual beach-cleaning fest. This year, the theme is "Helping our climate/helping our ocean" with extra attention paid to the impact on coral reefs as it coincides with the UN-sponsored International Year of the Reef. Canada's Department of Fisheries and Oceans has an activities poster to help coastal Canadians take some grassroots action (theoceanproject.org).

Ocean's Day also kicks off the start of Rivers to Oceans week, which runs until June 14. It's a fusion of Canadian Rivers Day, celebrated since 2003, and Ocean's Day. This year, the focus is on Canada's North, largely because about 60 per cent of Canada's fresh water drains north, and the safety of that water supply is under strain due to increased development and shipping traffic, not to mention the threat posed by global climate change of a vast ice-melt.

This year, Rivers to Oceans week coincides with the Bicentennial reenactment of the historic journey of the voyageurs of the David Thompson Brigade. On 2008thompsonbrigade.com, you can track the progress of the canoes, manned by 160 hardy souls who are paddling across four provinces on their 63-day journey, which will cover 3,600 kilometres and end on July 12.

GM strike possible

Detroit talks hinge on 'market demand' phrase

One of the most contentious issues to be discussed at today's meeting between the Canadian Auto Workers Union and General Motors in Detroit will be whether the automaker has the right to shut down production at its Oshawa truck plant two weeks after negotiating a labour agreement with workers there.

It's a battle that will come down to how the phrase "market demand" in the contract is interpreted.

CAW head Buzz Hargrove said he's in full support of the angry workers picketing outside the company's Canadian headquarters, and also signalled he's prepared to call a full-blown strike if the union's demands aren't met.

Toronto building permits up

Fewer apartments available for rent

Toronto's love affair with new condominium housing doesn't seem to be waning, despite warnings from analysts that the market has peaked and may be overbuilt.

April building permits were up by 24 per cent in the Toronto area to $1.26 billion, according to Statistics Canada. Toronto was well above the national figure of a 14.5 per cent increase.

Meanwhile, the Toronto apartment vacancy rate declined significantly this year down to 2.8 per cent (meaning 28 out of every 1,000 apartments available for rental are vacant) from 4 per cent in April of 2007, according to the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

» DERAIL The Transportation Safety Board has called for the removal of 12,000 wheel sets still in use on some Canadian Pacific Railway, Canadian National Railway and U.S. freight cars, warning the suspect wheels could result in derailments. In a report issued yesterday on a derailment near Buckskin, Ont., in January 2006, the board said at least 18 derailments in Canada have been caused by the wheel sets.

» JOB CUTS Continental Airlines said yesterday it is cutting 3,000 jobs and reducing capacity by 11 per cent. The cuts represent 6.5 per cent of Continental's work force of 45,000. In contrast, Canada's two largest airlines have said they have no plans to cut jobs and they continue to grow capacity.

» LOSS Extreme-sports-related retailer West 49 Inc. said yesterday it suffered a net loss of $4.2 million in its first quarter as comparable-store sales tumbled 8.1 per cent. It blamed the loss on "cross-border shopping and market conditions in Ontario."

A painful Olympic movement

YORK REPORT
MARTY YORK
marty.york@metronews.ca

Imagine how much better the Olympic Games could be were it not for the nitwits who run them.

What's the deal with these clowns? Why is it that the members of the International Olympic Committee can only be described with adjectives that start with the letter i? You know — irritating, ignorant, insensitive, insensible, idiotic...

One of them, someone named Gian Franco Kasper, actually was quoted as saying this in an effort to explain why women should continue to be banned from ski jumping in the Olympics: From a "medical point of view, (ski jumping is not) appropriate for ladies."

Huh?

Am I missing something here? Is there something about a female body that doesn't allow them to fly through the air as well as a male body can?

Oh, and then there was Jacques Rogge's rationale for the prohibition of women's ski jumping. Rogge is the president of the IOC and, you would suspect, intelligent. I'm afraid, however, that this is one i word that cannot be applied to him.

Women's ski jumping, Rogge said, must be excluded from the Olympics because it has only 80 competitors worldwide.

"If you have three medals, with 80 athletes competing on a regular basis internationally, the percentage of medal winners is extremely high," Rogge said. "In any another sport, you are speaking about hundreds of thousands, if not tens of millions of athletes, at a very high level, competing for one single medal. We do not want the medals to be diluted."

Thing is, Rogge's wrong. More than130 women from 16 countries are registered with the International Ski Federation. Hundreds more compete at national levels.

And Rogge's contention that "hundreds of thousands, if not tens of millions of athletes" compete at high levels in other Olympic sports? That's bull.

Has he not seen any women's ice hockey in recent years? Has he no clue about the dearth of competitive women hockey players or how women's hockey has become strictly a two-country sport? Is he unaware that Canada and the United States always meet for the gold medal?

There actually may be more formidable female ski jumpers on the planet than women hockey players. Or male badminton players. Or...

Seriously, the IOC has to smarten up and it must capitulate. It is 2008. Women deserve to ski jump in the Olympics. Period. End of story.

Sadly, women ski jumpers are suing to get in to the 2010 Games in Vancouver. You might help them by signing a petition. Check out www.wsj2010.com.

And don't forget to dot the i's.

Marty York has been a groundbreaking sports columnist and broadcaster in Canada for decades.

» MLB Pinch-hitter Jason Giambi connected for a two-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning of closer B.J. Ryan, rallying the New York Yankees to a 9-8 victory over the Blue Jays yesterday.

» CFL Running back Tyler Ebell's career has been put on hold. Argonauts head coach Rich Stubler told reporters yesterday that Ebell will require season-ending surgery after suffering a ruptured left Achilles tendon during practice on Wednesday morning.

» TENNIS Serbia's Ana Ivanovic beat compatriot Jelena Jankovic 6-4, 3-6, 6-4 yesterday to reach the French Open women's final. She will face Russia's Dinara Safina, a 6-3, 6-2 winner over compatriot Svetlana Kuznetsova.

Fever pitch

Switzerland, Austria gear up for Euro 2008

Austria's biggest football fan is larger than life and out of this world. He's got the body of a man, the head of a jackal — and the red jersey and white shorts of the national team.

"Awesome, isn't he?" said Hans Neuburger, gazing up at the seven-metre tall statue of Anubis, the ancient Egyptian god of the afterlife.

Anubis, who's been towering over central Vienna lately as part of an exhibition of the pharaohs' treasures, isn't usually dressed up like that. But then neither is the Austrian capital, awash in national flags and soccer ball motifs.

The European Championship opens tomorrow, and co-hosts Austria and Switzerland are in the unmistakable throes of football fever.

Bakers are kneading loaves into the size and shape of soccer balls. Flags of the two alpine countries and the 14 other competing nations are fluttering from car antennas. Leaflets advertising concerts and nightclubs have been reprinted to resemble red cards and yellow cards, and face paint is outselling mascara at boutiques.

Whimsy abounds, ranging from the freshly painted Adidas cleats adorning the feet of Greek and Roman figurines on Vienna's Karlsplatz to the giant likeness of a Swiss player that a farmer outside Geneva fashioned from huge hay bales.

"Expect Emotions" is the slogan of the three-week tournament, and there's no shortage of those, especially in Austria, where people still reeling from a soul-sapping spring are seeking solace in the beautiful game.

Police allegations that Josef Fritzl imprisoned his daughter in a windowless underground cell for 24 years and fathered seven children with her, including three who never saw the light of day until they were freed in April, triggered a scandal that shamed the nation.

Euro 2008, an event second only to the World Cup across this soccer-obsessed continent, will provide a welcome opportunity for some desperately needed merry-making.

"After all we've been through, all I want to do is enjoy a few beers with my friends and scream at the top of my lungs: 'Go Austria!'" said Franz Lutz, a university student strolling past Vienna's main "Fan Zone" being set up on the downtown Heldenplatz, or Heroes Square.

Tickets sold out months ago, so organizers are bracing for a total of four million fans — double the normal population of Vienna — to jam that square to watch the action on a giant screen beginning tomorrow and concluding June 29.

Security is being tightened at all eight Swiss and Austrian sites, where tens of thousands of police will be deployed, border guards will try to intercept known hooligans, and military jets will patrol the skies.

Austrian Chancellor Alfred Gusenbauer promised a "friendly and harmonious atmosphere," and counterterrorism officials played down the risk of trouble.

"We are taking every warning and all information very, very seriously. But at this stage, we have no indication that there will be threats, and that means the games are safe," said police spokesman Konrad Kogler.

National pride is on display, but that's to be expected. In Vienna, billboards for an online betting company poke fun at the various rivalries. "Life is a game!" they proclaim next to a photo of a kissing couple — her face painted with Austria's flag, his with Germany's.

In the Swiss capital Bern, an information centre in the shape of a giant football has been constructed at the central train station, and a massive sign on the main bridge leading into Bern's old town is counting down the days, hours and minutes until tomorrow.

» Officials stockpiled 1.7 million litres of beer, 60 tonnes of cold cuts, 600,000 rolls, 600,000 links of sausage and enough mineral water and soft drinks to submerge Vienna's Ernst Happel Stadium, where the final will be played on June 29.

Cristiano Ronaldo will be expected to do some magical things with the ball for Portugal to be successful at Euro 2008.

Watch out for Ronaldo: Experts

Marcello Lippi, Italian national team head coach (2004-2006) who led Italy to win the FIFA World Cup in 2006, offers his predictions for the UEFA Euro 2008 below:

GROUP A: "Portugal will be the winning team, and Cristiano Ronaldo, easy to say, will be the star — perhaps the star off all the Euro 2008. But pay attention to the Czech Republic."

GROUP B: "I say Germany will win. Talking about the stars, I say the German attacker Lucas Podolsky. I find him great."

GROUP C: "Definitely I say Italy, and it couldn't be different for me. The star? Luca Toni."

GROUP D: "I say Spain and Fernando Torres, one of the most modern strikers I know."

Vicente del Bosque, coach of Real Madrid from 1999-2003, offers his predictions for the UEFA Euro 2008 below:

GROUP A: "Portugal. There's a new generation of good players. They already had an excellent tournament in the last Euro. It's the best team. Cristiano Ronaldo is currently the star in Europa and the top scorer among all European leagues. He knows how to play perfectly in every area of the pitch, and, moreover, he is a great scorer."

GROUP B: "Germany. They have very experienced players and they'll do a great job. Watch for Luka Modric (Croatia). He is a very young talent, a kid with very good technical skills. This Euro could be his takeoff."

GROUP C: "Italy. They have a very competitive football league and enough efficiency to take advantage of everything. They also have big names with a lot of experience. Watch for Karim Benzema (France). His future is great. He has a modern striker style, with very good technique."

GROUP D: "Spain. The team has been built around young players, ready to give their best and with enough boost to do a great Euro. Watch for Andrés Iniesta Luján (Spain). He is a midfielder that does everything very well. He plays very smoothly, and can perform in every single space in the pitch. He is an outstanding player. If he passes the Euro exam with great marks, it will promote his great career."

Sandler-izing Middle East tensions

You Don't Mess with the Zohan

Stars Adam Sandler, John Turturro
Director Dennis Dugan
14A

By RICK MCGINNIS
Metro Toronto

Adam Sandler plays a Mossad agent-turned-hairstylist in You Don't Mess with the Zohan, opening today.

REVIEW NO ONE is expecting a treatise on the crisis in the Middle East from Adam Sandler, but the comedian has assumed the role of lightning rod just by setting his film amidst the war that inevitably defeats anyone who says they can solve it.

Sandler plays the title role in the film, a sort of Israeli James Bond with a secret dream of styling hair in New York City, who fakes his death and goes off to live his blow-dried, '80s-inspired dream.

Sandler plays Zohan with an Israeli accent so painstakingly bad that it becomes its own joke, as does the film's barrage of Hebrew and Arab slang, most of it invented.

Needless to say, most of these newly minted words are euphemisms for breasts, erections, or the sexual act; if Sandler does have any hidden political agenda, it just might be dragging a conflict that's frequently described as an obscenity down to the level of real smuttiness.

Rejected by Paul Mitchell's Manhattan salon, Zohan ends up in the boroughs, on a street where Jewish and Muslim businesses sit side by side, cutting hair in a struggling hair salon owned by a pretty Palestinian (Emmanuelle Chriqui), making his reputation by servicing his elderly female clients with the casual hedonism that's supposed to be a hallmark of Tel Aviv club culture.

His idyllic exile ends when he's recognized by an Arab cab driver (the inevitable Rob Schneider) who passes the news on to The Phantom (John Turturro), his Palestinian nemesis.

There's an evil real estate developer, a big showdown, and cameos from Mariah Carey, Chris Rock, John McEnroe and George Takei.

At the end, Sandler imagines that we'd all get along a whole lot better by forgetting our differences and — at least for guys — concentrating on the things that unite us, like sports, consumer electronics, and earnest debates about who we'd rather tap — Hillary or Chelsea.

If only it were that simple.

Panda cast kicks up laughs

Kung Fu Panda

Stars Jack Black, Dustin Hoffman, Angelina Jolie

Director Mark Osborne John Stevenson

PG

By CHRIS ATCHISON
Metro Toronto

REVIEW BEFORE WE BEGIN, let's get the clichés out of the way – yes, everybody is Kung Fu Fighting in Kung Fu Panda and yes, a cover of Carl Douglas' one-hit wonder 1974 track of the same name features on the film's soundtrack.

But that's where the clichés end. Co-directors John Stevenson and Mark Osborne have carefully adhered to the conventions of the martial arts genre without exploiting them, opting instead to pay homage to the movies of their youth with the use of animation and Jack Black's very appropriate brand of humour.

Kung Fu Panda introduces us to Po (Be Kind Rewind's Black), a lazy panda who dreams of one day becoming a martial arts master, but is simply too fat and lazy to make it happen.

That is until he one day makes his way to a nearby temple to witness the crowning of the next 'chosen one' destined to hold the title of master, only to find himself tagged with the honour, much to the chagrin of the crusty guru Shifu (Stranger Than Fiction's Dustin Hoffman). The future of China – which just happens to be populated by talking animals – rests in Po's paws as he begins training with Shifu's pupils: Master Monkey (Rush Hour 3's Jackie Chan), Master Tigress (Beowulf's Angelina Jolie), Master Viper (Watching The Detectives' Lucy Liu), Master Mantis (Superbad's Seth Rogen) and Master Crane (Arrested Development's David Cross). Matters become more pressing when it's learned that the evil Tai Lung (Hot Rod's Ian McShane) has escaped from prison and is ready for a showdown with Shifu.

Shifu (voiced by Dustin Hoffman) in Kung Fu Panda.

The comedy, if you hadn't guessed, is derived from an over-weight panda trying to master kung fu. For this, Black is the perfect choice to voice Po, a character built almost solely around the actor's manic delivery. The rest of the casting is also spot-on – yes, even Dustin Hoffman as an aging warrior – while the fight scenes are spectacular.

And although those scenes are full of laughs, they're also carefully designed to present kung fu in a realistic fashion utilizing genuine fighting styles. As per Stevenson and Osborne's directions, the fights drive the story from start to finish, while Yong Duk Jhun's cinematography and the film's fantastic animation bring China to life in a way we've never seen before. Kids will love watching a dumb panda fumbling around as he tries to save his village from destruction of a sinister snow leopard.

My Brother captures more than sibling rivalry

My Brother is an Only Child

Stars Elio Germano, Riccardo Scamarcio

Director Daniele Luchetti

14A

By STEVE GOW
for Metro Toronto

REVIEW SIBLING RIVALRY may not exactly be a groundbreaking notion in cinema, but sibling rivalry based on the opposing ideologies of Fascism and Communism in 1960's Italy is ... well, you don't see that everyday. In My Brother Is An Only Child, filmmaker Daniele Luchetti explores the diametrically-opposed ambitions of two brothers of the same family. Whereas older, handsome Manrico (Riccardo Scamarcio) fights for the rights of the working class, little brother Accio (Elio Germano) is an outright Fascist, getting into scraps and idolizing his hero Mussolini. You can obviously see how they might not get along. Intimidated by the politics of 1960s Italy, you say? No worry. As Luchetti has insisted, "the film does not take a political stand; it talks about people who take stands."

And it does that well. Ultimately, My Brother isn't so much about two siblings fighting for their ideologies as it is about two brothers fighting for their identity; a struggle that is heightened once Accio falls in love with Manrico's girlfriend. This film works because Luchetti captures honest moments of realism and humour. Even if the political details of the day lose you, My Brother still succeeds as an excellent portrait of what it's like to come of age in 1960s Italy.

Cinematography not enough

The Children Of Huang Shi

Stars Jonathan Rhys Meyers
Director Roger Spottiswoode

14A

By CHRIS ATCHISON
Metro Toronto

REVIEW CANADIAN-BORN director Roger Spottiswoode shifts gears from an exploration of retired Canadian General Romeo Dallaire's desperate efforts to save millions from slaughter during the Rwandan genocide in last year's Shake Hands With The Devil, to an equally harrowing tale of bravery in his latest The Children Of Huang Shi.

Unfortunately, both historically-based films are of similar, relatively poor quality.

The Children Of Huang Shi tells the story of English adventurer George Hogg (Jonathan Rhys Meyers) and his efforts to save a group of orphaned Chinese children from the advancing Japanese army in 1944 at the height of the Second Sino-Japanese War.

Michelle Yeoh stars in The Children of Huang Shi, now playing.

The Oxford-educated Hogg winds up caring for the boys after being saved by a communist freedom fighter (Chow Yun-Fat) and essentially deserted at their orphanage by Australian nurse Lee Pearson (Radha Mitchell). He begins teaching the boys and eventually comes to the conclusion that a near-1,000 kilometre hike is the only way to save them from the Japanese or forced enlistment at the hands of Chinese nationalist forces.

Hogg eventually falls for the nurse and saves the kids before succumbing to a bout with tetanus.

That could be a spoiler for those who unfamiliar with Hogg's story, but the real disappointment here is Spottiswoode's direction and remarkably lacklustre chemistry between Rhys Meyers and Mitchell.

While Rhys Meyers has promise as an actor and has delivered solid performances of late – he even made August Rush partially bearable, which was no simple task – the Irish actor delivers his lines in such a stunted, unbelievable fashion audiences might think they've stumbled into a community theatre play put to film.

Mitchell is just as bad and it's frankly difficult to tell whether it's the actors or Jane Hawksley and James MacManus' hokum-laden, abridged script that's the bigger problem.

Cinematographer Zhao Xiaoding displays rural China in vivid detail, but impressive landscape shots simply aren't enough to carry The Children Of Huang Shi.

Save your money and wait for the DVD.

Quote OF THE WEEK

"People forget your flaws and imperfections if they see you're happy. From the outside, it seems like we have great lives but there are pressures, such as lack of time, being chased by the paparazzi and being criticized all the time. We'd sit there and moan to each other and then after a few hours I'd burst out laughing because, ultimately, we both love our jobs and are incredibly privileged to have these lives.

REVIEW THERE'S REALLY no subtle way to cinematically address the issue of abortion. In the case of Finn's Girl however, the provocative subject particularly sits like a pothole in the middle of Daytona Speedway.

Not that Finn's is a pro-life film, mind you.

There's surely no mistaking its point of view; a pair of hysterically-portrayed pro-life protesters make sure of that.

Hell, this melodrama even gives more credibility to a trio of pot-smoking prepubescent brats who spend their free time stealing skin mags from the local bookstore than it does the pro-lifers.

But maybe that's the point.

One of those brats happens to be Zelly (Maya Ritter). Coping with her lesbian mom's recent passing, she's now cared for by mom's widow Finn (Brooke Johnson) who proves a suitable replacement — when she's not shacking up with her abortion-clinic assistant or dodging gunshots by those pro-life zealots.

Obviously, this film aims to shed light on many heavy issues — abortion, parthenogenesis; even ecological concerns find a way into this movie.

But as much as Finn's Girl wants to sink its teeth into these hot topics, a heavy-handed script and clunky performances leave it about as affecting as an after-school special.

Keira Knightley clashed with her screenwriter mother Sharman MacDonald over their movie The Edge of Love, because the actress refused to play the part her mom wrote for her. As a result, another character was transformed to Knightley's liking. IMDB.COM

The untold story of Genghis Khan

Mongol

Mongol is a film that reaches almost epic status.

REVIEW THERE WERE quite a few movies overlooked for a Best Foreign Film nomination at this year's Oscars: Persepolis and The Band's Visit just to name a pair.

So it was with relatively high expectations I sat down to Mongol, one of those acclaimed films' successors.

Brought to life by Russian filmmaker Sergei Bodrov (Nomad), Mongol boasts the "untold story of Genghis Khan."

And what an untold story it is. In the early 12th Century, nine year old Temudgin is forced to choose a wife and witness his powerful father's murder at the hands of a rival tribe member.

Swearing to avenge dear daddy's death and unconditional devotion to his bride, Temudgin overcomes obstacle after bloody obstacle to eventually become – you guessed it — Genghis friggin' Khan, baby!

Spanning over 30 years, Mongol is a huge movie that most remarkably features stunning cinematography and the kind of epic battles reserved for Tinseltown's biggest blockbusters. Bodrov even shot Mongol using old-school methods; creating sets in remote areas of Asia, relying on some 600 crewmembers and thousands of extras.

However, with today's moviegoers desensitized by overblown computer-generated effects, Mongol's accomplishments may be somewhat overlooked.

If you search beyond the big stuff however, you'll find a gripping love story bubbling beneath the bloodiness and that is perhaps the real reason Mongol earned its Oscar nomination.

Jack and the Kung Fu Panda

Black signing on key to get movie made — finally

By GLEN MILLER
Metro Toronto

FEATURE FEEL-GOOD STORY. Top-shelf animation. An all-star production team. And a struggle to get it made.

After four-plus years in production, the journey for Kung Fu Panda has ended with an uplifting family film that has a good shot of attaining the "classic" branding that will serve it well for years to come. So it's a good thing that Jack Black finally gave his OK to accept the lead voiceover role of panda Po. Otherwise producer Melissa Cobb would probably still be waiting to get the DreamWorks film completed. It opens in theatres today.

"He was the only person we could think of (for the Po role) but he said no a few times because he was busy or he wasn't in a place (mindset) where he wanted to do it," Cobb said at a press conference in Los Angeles. Joining Black in the voiceover cast are two-time Academy award winner Dustin Hoffman, Angelina Jolie, Lucy Liu and Jackie Chan. Might be some box-office appeal there.

After a full-out, last-ditch sales pitch by co-director John Stevenson, who showed Black an animation of the Po character speaking dialogue from his role in the School of Rock to bait Black, the chase for the star finally became the catch. Once committed, as Black explains it, there was little preparation or research to do because he says the role is essentially him in his real life: a little chubby, in awe of his heroes growing up and always dreaming of bigger things.

The story begins with Po wanting to leave his father's noodle shop and somehow find a way to be a kung fu star, joining the ranks of his fighting heroes called the Furious Five. From that group must come the new Dragon Warrior who must have the goods to fend off the most menacing warrior in the land, snow leopard Tai Lung.

With determination, Po gets himself on track to be his own hero. With the engaging tug of war with his mentor, Master Shifu (Hoffman), the student and master learn a few things about each other and themselves.

Under the direction of Stevenson and co-director Mark Osborne, the production had the mandate of honoring the martial arts genre and the Chinese culture.

There's lots of humour, but parody got the boot. So did any pop culture references. "We did tons and tons of research," said Osborne. "It was very important for us to honor the culture of kung fu."

"Perhaps the last true wrestling hero. . . . Fascinating. . . . A story packed with drugs, sex, vicious family in-fighting and tales of life on the road in a business where the only people who really understood were the ones who shared the ring." —The Globe and Mail

No one has ever written about wrestling like Bret Hart. No one has ever lived a life like Bret Hart's.

"Hart blends profane bitterness with soaring joy often on the same page. . . . His book is uncommonly self-critical on sports autobiography shelves sagging with self-promoting pap."

Crew shapes Huang Shi

By CHRIS ATCHISON

CHRIS ATCHISON/METRO TORONTO

Canadian-born director Roger Spottiswoode found no challenge was insurmountable for his crew when filming The Children Of Huang Shi.

FEATURE IT'S AMAZING the difference a determined film crew can make.

Canadian-born director Roger Spottiswoode learned exactly that on the set of his latest film The Children Of Huang Shi. Specifically, Spottiswoode (Shake Hands With The Devil) found that no challenge was insurmountable for his local crew as they attempted seemingly impossible shots throughout the film's shoot in rural China.

"The last shot in the film would have been made with a helicopter because you couldn't get a crane where we were," the director recalls. "You couldn't carry a one-ton crane up (a mountain). The Chinese crew carried a crane up there. There's no Western crew that would have done it, they would have laughed if you asked them to do it — no one would have had the nerve to ask them to do that. But 150 people carried this up a mountain without even thinking about it. Things happen in China in a different way."

The Children Of Huang Shi tells the story of English adventurer George Hogg (August Rush's Jonathan Rhys Meyers), who arrived in China in 1937 to cover the Second Sino-Japanese War as a correspondent, but found himself teaching and caring for a group of orphaned boys.

As the Japanese army approached Huang Shi, site of the orphanage, Hogg gathered the students and marched them nearly 1,000 kilometres to Gansu Province where he re-established a school and resumed teaching until his passing in 1945 from a tetanus infection.

Hogg's legacy is naturally close to the hearts of Chinese who have grown up with the tales of his leadership — literally under fire — from the surviving orphans who kept the story alive.

Beyond logistics, it was one of the reasons why Spottiswoode chose to use Chinese crews to shoot the film and allowed them to shape much of the art direction cinematography, in what he describes as a conscious effort to create a visual experience which mirrored Hogg's.

But the 63-year-old director points out that not even gruelling shoots up mountain sides could prepare him for press days with Chinese media, who were unfamiliar with many of the themes and historical points made in the film.

"We have references in the film to the fact that the nationalists were starving their own soldiers, we see some things about the past that don't make sense to them, that are well-known, but they're not aware of," Spottiswoode explains.

"I had some criticism over how casting a capitalist (Pirates of the Caribbean: At World's End's Chow Yun-Fat) playing a communist, which threw me ... In their eyes, Chow Yun-Fat is a wealthy Hong Kong actor who is now playing a middle-class Chinese communist officer. They didn't even know that those people existed because it's not (in their history books)."

The film is in theatres today.

INDIANA JONES AND THE KINGDOM OF THE CRYSTAL SKULL

★★★★ (out of 5)

Film fans will be hard-pressed not to smile when they hear John Williams' famed score and see that trademark fedora make its first big-screen appearance in 19 years, in a re-introduction to the greatest adventure character of all time. While the dialogue plods at times and a few scenes are more than a little far-fetched, The Kingdom Of The Crystal Skull is pure summertime blockbuster joy.

IRON MAN

★★★★ (out of 5)

Robert Downey Jr. as Iron Man, a.k.a. arms dealer turned good guy Tony Stark, proves he's one of today's best character actors. With a great supporting cast (Jeff Bridges, Gwyneth Paltrow), thrilling action sequences and funny dialogue, Iron Man is a welcome return to the comic book movie genre.

SEX AND THE CITY

The feature adaptation of Sex And The City is among the year's most highly anticipated films. The film catches up with Carrie (Sarah Jessica Parker), Miranda (Cynthia Nixon), Samantha (Kim Cattrall) and Charlotte (Kristin Davis) four years after the TV series finale. Problems arise—someone has an affair, someone gets jilted, and communication issues threaten to tear up the foursome. It can all be sorted out with endless conversation and shopping. STRANGERS

★★★★ ⇨▭⇨

Liv Tyler (Lord of the Rings) and Scott Speedman (Weirdsville) are harassed by a group of mask-wearing oddballs in the middle of the night. Although the plot doesn't sound too shockingly original, what first-time writer/director Bryan Bertino accomplishes is an incredibly calculated, intense suspense picture wrought with themes of fate and circumstance.

THE CHRONICLES OF NARNIA: PRINCE CASPIAN ★★★★

Oscar-nominated director Andrew Adamson (Shrek, Shrek 2) does a fine job bringing the second instalment of the Narnia Chronicles to life with a blend of old-fashioned sword fights and dazzling special effects. This is another well-casted, well-written entry in the series.

WHAT HAPPENS IN VEGAS ★⇨▭⇨

Jack (Ashton Kutcher) and Joy (Cameron Diaz) get hitched one boozy Vegas night. The morning-after annulment is cancelled when he hits a $3-million jackpot with her quarter. Now they're stuck with each other for the sake of the dough. A promising start can't save this ordinary, slightly offensive film.

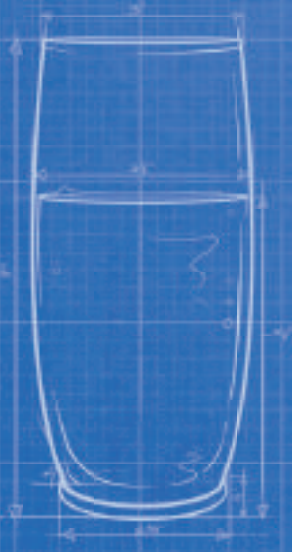
TOGETHER WE CAN ENSURE A FUTURE WITH FRESH WATER



HERE'S THE PLAN

The scarcity of clean, fresh water is a major threat to human health and economic development around the world. Even in developed countries, fresh water resources are often at risk, affecting the water we depend on everyday.

By working together to protect our natural water resources, we can ensure there will be enough fresh water for future generations. Through the RBC® Blue Water Project, we are already working to help protect our local watersheds. Now we're inviting you to join us.

To find out more about the RBC Blue Water Project visit rbc.com/bluewater or join us on Friday June 13th at your local RBC branch.

Narrow Stairs climbs charts

Death Cab For Cutie hits No. 1 with latest album

By IAN NATHANSON
For Metro Toronto

Death Cab For Cutie's new disc Narrow Stairs debuted at No. 1 on album charts last month.

Profile LIKE A NUMBER of 20th century writers and artists who sought inspiration while visiting the isolated central California locale of Big Sur, Death Cab For Cutie front man Ben Gibbard had hoped to seek similar enlightenment whilst writing songs for Narrow Stairs, the band's seventh studio album, which debuted at No.1 on the Billboard 200 last month.

Instead, the 32-year-old came away rather disillusioned. "I guess I was expecting some kind of profundity to hit me. I wanted to project some kind of transcendence of being in this place," Gibbard says, noting he wanted to follow in the proverbial footsteps of literary idol Jack Kerouac, who holed himself up in a cabin at Big Sur to pen his 1960s novel of the same name. "For me, I felt foolish expecting some kind of answer by making a pilgrimage to this place that belonged to one of my heroes.

"That's how I would best describe what the song Bixby Canyon Bridge is about; how foolish we always feel when we project transcendence or salvation onto any physical thing."

Narrow Stairs also explores the regrets of a bride who marries the wrong beau (Cath...), the woes of a chum's relationship breakup (Your New Twin-Sized Bed) and goes a step creepier into relaying the controlling mind of a stalker (I Will Possess Your Heart). That's not to say the Washington State-based quartet operates under a cloud of total doom and gloom. Quite the contrary: Gibbard points out that he, guitarist/producer Chris Walla, bassist Nick Harmer and drummer Jason McGerr were happy enough to try and push new boundaries. Rather than record songs in a piecemeal, layered fashion a la 2005's Grammy-nominated Plans, Death Cab worked more like a live band jamming, keeping in little "happy accidents" such as a disconnected guitar chord or a slashing tape cut.

But the most notable form of enlightenment comes from first single I Will Possess Your Heart, eight minutes and 31 seconds long, with vocals appearing nearly five minutes in.

"It might be a stretch to say that an eight-and-a-half minute single with no vocals at the front end should somehow become a No. 1 song in any country ... But if there's one thing I hope we can achieve, it's to show people that if you have a song that's catchy enough, the old rules of what a single should be shouldn't have to apply."

Album leaks fuel paranoia

THE MUSIC GEEK
ALAN CROSS
alan@ongoinghistory.com

Beck is paranoid. I know this because I'm jammed into the middle seat, one row from the toilets, on a wretched American airliner heading to Los Angeles.

Adding to my hell is the tubby Midwestern seatmate who won't stop talking about how excited he is to be visiting the back lot at Universal Studios. I consider telling him about the fire, but after about 20 minutes of him burbling about Back To The Future, I figure he deserves the surprise.

Beck's paranoia surrounds the release of his new album, tentatively titled Modern Guilt. With CD sales on a supersonic vector downwards, timing the appearance of a new album has never been more critical. It must not — cannot — appear online before it gets a chance to be shipped to stores. Nothing ruins careful marketing plans like an album leak. And when marketing plans are derailed, sales crater.

Take Weezer's Red Album, which came out this past Tuesday. It wasn't supposed to be released until June 24th. But sometime on May 7 — the day after the band finished pre-release interviews with journalists (including me) — it showed up on a variety of torrent sites, forcing the band, their management and their label into some serious damage control. No one knows who leaked it online, but given how careful the Weezer people were with the demo disc, it had to be some kind of weird inside job. We'll see what happens with first week sales when the numbers are released on Wednesday.

A few days later, I heard the new Coldplay album, Viva la Vida, at a private listening room set up by their label, EMI. After my cellphone was confiscated, a burly dude in a security uniform wanded me as if I might have C4 wrapped in tinfoil around my chest. I almost expected him to X-ray my shoes. Would someone go to a listening session wearing a wire? Maybe. That's how paranoid EMI is about new Coldplay music going over the wall.

Beck is being even more careful. The only listening session will be held in the L.A. offices of his manager, John Silva — hence my current air travel hell. Knowing John — whose other clients include the Foo Fighters and Jimmy Eat World — security will be super-tight. I wouldn't be surprised if I'm fingerprinted and asked for a DNA sample. Or maybe I'm just paranoid.

CD REVIEWS

music@metronews.ca

Martha Wainwright

Album: I Know You're Married But I've Got Feelings Too
Label: MapleMusic/Universal
Release Date: June 3

MONTREAL'S MARTHA WAINWRIGHT is no stranger to fans of her famous brother, Rufus — she sang backup for him for years — but the rest of Canada hasn't yet embraced the engaging singer-songwriter. That is, until now. Her sophomore album is easily one of the better discs to hit stores this year. It's emotional, passionate, catchy and complex, and blows her debut record out of the water. Standout tracks include the folky acoustic number Bleeding All Over Me and the Broadway musical-ish Tower Song.

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI

Aimee Mann

Album: @#%&*! Smilers
Label: Burgundy/Sony BMG
Release Date: June 3

TWO THINGS YOU can generally rely on as far as this L.A. singer-songwriter vet is concerned: Quality writing and tuneful arrangements. Mann replaces her previous bitter bantering and conceptual works with straightforward, melancholy-laden character sketches about insecurity (the semi-autobiographical Thirty One Today), troubled personalities (Medicine Wheel, Little Tornados), addictions (Columbus Ave., Freeway) and loves lost (Phoenix). Album No. 7 might not grab one's immediate attention in the vein of Mann's earlier efforts (1996's I'm With Stupid, for instance); rather, it's an unfolding process that ultimately rewards upon subsequent listens.

IAN NATHANSON

Hey Rosetta!

Album: Into Your Lungs
Label: Sonic/Warner
Release Date: June 3

EVER SINCE NEWFOUNDLAND-based six-piece Hey Rosetta! released their EP last year, people have been waiting for their next move. Luckily for them, their full-length debut delivers. Into Your Lungs combines introspective acoustics with hard driving rock 'n' roll — think Matthew Good-meets-Hawksley Workman (he produced the record) — while violin, piano and cello fill out the sound. The songs are solid, but they're also a little long with several tunes at least five minutes long. With a little editing, these Newfies should hit it big.

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI

Weezer

Album: The Red Album
Label: DGC/Interscope/Universal
Release Date: June 3

RIVERS CUOMO AND company remain relevant by taking geeky pokes at sacred cows like teen rebellion (Troublemaker) and Timbaland (Pork and Beans). Even the Red Hot Chili Peppers and The Rolling Stones get a few shots in Everybody Get Dangerous. Parts of this self-titled album (forever to be known as the red one) are hilarious. Others are deeply touching, like Cuomo's unabashed admission that Gordon Lightfoot, Michael Jackson and (gag) Debbie Gibson wrote some of his "Heartsongs."

GRAHAM ROCKINGHAM

The Ting Tings

Album: We Started Nothing
Label: Columbia/Sony BMG
Release Date: June 3

IF THERE'S A SUREFIRE way to make money in today's iTunes age, it's by writing an entire album of singles. That's exactly what new U.K. buzz band The Ting Tings have done — their new disc boasts 10 wildly infectious tunes that could all wind up topping radio charts. The record is perfect for single-song downloaders, but it's too over the top for those who covet full records. The duo's high energy tunes and repetitive shouts are fun, but hard to stomach after a few spins.

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI

Jewel

Album: Perfectly Clear
Label: The Valory Music Co./Open Road/Universal
Release Date: June 3

AT LEAST THE country genre better suits this Alaska-born songstress than her 2003 faux pop tart misstep, 0304. Plus, Jewel's voice — both as sweet singer and occasional yodeller— and acoustic guitar stylings of her singer-songwriter past mesh naturally with the overall feel of this seventh studio album. All the right elements are in place: The piano-dominant title cut's a promising heartbroken update to past hit Foolish Games; the soft, bouncy Love Is A Garden shows potential as the next You Were Meant For Me. It's a shame, though, the remainder of Perfectly Clear comes off as perfectly bland and forgettable.

IAN NATHANSON

Gavin Rossdale

Album: Wanderlust
Label: Interscope/Universal
Release Date: June 3

UBER-EARNEST RADIO rock from the former front man of Bush. Formulaic power chords and goopy, synthetic lyrics (how can anyone seriously record a song these days called Forever May You Run?). Not even mega producer Bob Rock (Metallica/Motley Crue) could save this turkey. Rossdale is probably best known now for being married to Gwen Stefani and so he shall remain.

MUSIC Melanie C, Jesse McCartney and Whitney Port are among the presenters unveiled yesterday for the 19th Annual MuchMusic Video Awards June 15.

"The insanity of the MMVAs is a combination of the live show, screaming fans, and celeb-induced, heart-pumping adrenalin" Sheila Sullivan, Director of Programming, MuchMusic, said in a statement.

Other presenters announced yesterday include Chace Crawford of Gossip Girl, pop-punk outfit Sum 41, The Office's Rainn Wilson and celebrity gossip blogger Perez Hilton.

Mad Men leaping forward?

TRULY MADLY: The first season of Mad Men — AMC's surprise hit — is getting a replay on CTV here starting this Sunday, in anticipation of season two's debut on the A Channel in the fall, and the DVD box set of season one is due out next month, which would probably explain why you can't throw an empty Johnny Walker Black bottle around here without hitting an ad or cover story about the show.

Flawed and inconsistent, even unbelievable, Mad Men has a pointedly selective take on the period when it's set — the button-down, pre-Beatles early '60s. I love the show, flaws and all, which is why I can't help but be intrigued by the season two rumours.

Late last week, USA Today ran a piece in which creator Matthew Weiner said that the second season will take place after what seems to be a popular trend in TV dramas — a leap forward in time. Shows such as Lost, Battlestar Galactica and Desperate Housewives have all hit the fast-forward button, but Weiner says that Mad Men's leapfrog won't be a big one:

"The world has changed a little bit, but the stories will involve two things: One is that you have to live with the consequences of your actions, and (the other is) people don't change," he says. Viewers "will be seeing their old friends, but they will have new problems."

All the main players from season one are in place when season two begins, but Weiner says that "you will know that something different has happened." With the Bay of Pigs and the Cuban Missile Crisis to help colour the background — I can't wait to see how the Kennedy assassination is handled — Mad Men has a lot to play with before the first kid comes home from college with long hair.

School Crush

Penélope Cruz dazzles as the temptress who seduces her older professor in Elegy.

By Denis Seguin
Contributing Writer

Penélope Cruz casually enters the room, thumb-scrolling on her BlackBerry. Next, she pulls out a Marlboro and asks "¿Alguien tiene fuego?" which is a sexy way of saying "Anyone got a light?" The good news? It seems that she's a regular human being, vices and all.

Now for the bad news: Cruz doesn't dish — even if the question posed is purely hypothetical. Like whether she could ever imagine having a love affair with a man more than 40 years her senior — a fair question, seeing as it lies at the heart of her new movie, Elegy.

Based on the Philip Roth novel The Dying Animal and brilliantly adapted and directed by Isabel Coixet, the film stars Ben Kingsley as a Manhattan sophisticate who falls in love with one of his students. Cruz plays Consuela, a mature student who becomes the object of his desire and then the eye of his hurricane.

"I think Philip Roth is a genius," says Cruz. "He makes you understand all the characters — even the ones you don't like and the ones that make the biggest mistakes. You understand them — you understand their fears. He's a very honest writer. I believed the story, and I connected with it."

FACE VALUE

Her enviable figure may have earned her the nickname "The Body," but now that Elle Macpherson is Revlon's newest global ambassador, her face is taking centre stage. The 45-year-old kicks off her role this fall in advertisements for the company's latest cosmetics campaign. (Gucci Westman, Revlon's new artistic director, will do her makeup.) But off-camera, her beauty regimen is decidedly low-key. "I believe that beauty comes from the inside," says the mother of two. "I spend more time having a good laugh with my kids than I do looking in the mirror."

Get the glow

Experts weigh in on finding right bronzer

By SANDY CAETANO
Metro Toronto

WITH TODAY'S heightened awareness of skin damage caused by ultraviolet rays, the amount of tanning products available for 'faking it' are endless.

So achieving that sought-after, sexy bronze glow is really just about doing some research and finding the tools that work best for you.

"You can find bronzers in a variety of formulations, such as gel, powder, and liquid," explains Kelly Amsterdam, director of Clinique Global Communications, Canada. "Aside from bronzers, you can also achieve a sun kissed glow with products like tinted moisturizers, blush and loose powders. The key is starting with a healthy-looking complexion, and finding the right, custom-fit bronzing product for your skin type."

Sephora Pro Beauty team expert Adi Lando says women can achieve that perfect summer glow easily with multi-use products like the Sephora Bronzing Kit.

"Complete with a tri-coloured bronzer for that perfect sun-kissed glow, which doubles as an eye shadow, bronzing brush and lip gloss," he says.

When going the bronzing powder route, the right brush will also help by blending the makeup to give you a flawless finish.

"Think about where the sun would hit you naturally, and try making the number three down your face (forehead, cheek bones and jaw line, and finish down the nose)," he says. "These are the proper areas of application so the bronzed look is natural and not over-done."

When choosing a bronzer it is important to keep in mind your skin type. For example, if you have oily skin you may want to try powders that are matte, with little to no shimmer.

"Before even applying a bronzing product, regardless of formulation, women should make sure their skin is in the best possible condition," advises Amsterdam. "Any summer glow will only look as good as the appearance of the skin underneath – oilier skin types, for example, will definitely want to ensure any bronzer they use is oil-free, and will probably prefer a gel or powder formulation over a more emollient cream."

If you're not sure what bronzer is best for you, stop by a cosmetic counter and seek expert advice. It's a great opportunity to have a look at your best bronzing options, and get free one-on-one application tips and tricks.

Denyse Beaulieu, creative manager at Groupe Marcelle, says another thing to keep in mind is that less really is more. So don't start by caking on too much powder or liquid foundation on your face.

"Start with a little; it's always easier to build than to remove regardless of the formula, whether it be powder, liquid or self-tanner," says Beaulieu. "Less does equal a more natural looking complexion."

Bronzer do's and don'ts

DO:
- Apply on a clean face
- Moisturize your face before applying bronzer
- If using a self-tanner always exfoliate
- Always start off with a little and add as you go
- Use a good lighting for application
- Tap off some of the bronzing powder before application

DON'T:
- Don't forget your neck and ears, everything needs to match
- Don't mix your other brushes with your bronzing brush, one brush per item since residue remains on the brush you risk putting too many different shades on your face

Sophie is au naturale

Sophie Gregoire Trudeau, Quebec correspondent for eTalk airing weeknights on CTV:

Q What products make you look and feel good?

A Water, water, and water (tap, NEVER bottled)! And then, any organic bathing soaps, natural shea butter, Dermalogica products, Aveda night nutrients, and my SPF 30 for the face and body.

Q Describe your style.

A I never know the answer to this question. I would describe my style: As natural as possible. Be yourself. Feel free in your clothes. Wear what you like. Be careful with trends.

Q What is your regular fitness routine?

A I take African dance classes once a week. I walk uphill every morning with my son Xavier in his stroller on Mount Royal through a beautiful cemetery.

Q What is your daily meal and beverage plan?

A I LOVE to cook and eat. I'll try anything. I even tried bat meat ... once, never twice. I buy organic and local as much as possible. I do love a good glass of wine and dark chocolate. I sometimes crave McDonald's poutine and steamed hot dogs.

Q Do you prefer to prepare your meals or eat out?

A I prefer to prepare my meals and eat at home. I have a very busy lifestyle and a husband in politics. So when out, we try to eat healthy.

Q What is the philosophy you live by?

A Life is serious, you don't have to be. Open yourself to others. Love with all your heart and soul.

Exhibit showcases Laurent legacy

Forty years of design on display in Montreal

As the world celebrates the life and work of designer Yves Saint Laurent, anyone venturing into the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts will get to see his creations first-hand.

The museum is showcasing a retrospective of the groundbreaking couturier's 40-year career in a show that will run until Sept. 28, and then move to San Francisco.

The exhibit of 148 garments and accessories that sprang from the Parisian fashion icon has an added poignancy given his death Sunday after a year-long battle with brain cancer.

"When we worked on the exhibition, we were working with a living legend," said Diane Charbonneau, one of the exhibit's curators. "Now we're working with a legacy."

An Yves Saint Laurent silk jacket and trousers shown in a 1966 photo. The Montreal Museum of Fine Arts is hosting an exhibition of the designer's 40-year career.

The garments in the exhibit are drawn from Saint Laurent's own runway collection. He was meticulous about archiving all his examples, which are maintained by the Fondation Pierre Berge-Yves Saint Laurent and are in mint condition.

Charbonneau, who is also curator of contemporary decorative arts at the museum, says a show highlighting fashion is perfectly at home amid all the paintings and sculptures.

"We're always interested in celebrating creativity in its largest sense," she said. "I think it's just an extension of our interests in various subjects that brought us to fashion."

The show is a thematic look at Saint Laurent's creations since 1962, taking the viewer from the initial sketches of a design, through his use of colour, and showcasing garments influenced by nature and his interest in art and literature.

Luminato rises up

Arts festival event celebrates scene on Queen West

By RICK McGINNIS
Metro Toronto

LUMINATO PHOTO

The Parachute Club is among other Queen West veterans who are performing in the Queen Street Celebration at Luminato.

SURVEYING THE scene before his band is set to play the opening weekend of Luminato, drummer Billy Bryans calls the week-long arts festival "this big, sprawling beast."

It's as good a description as any — the second edition of the Toronto festival has expanded into a wild collection of music and dance, theatre, movies, readings, exhibits and what can only be called "events," as they combine two or all of the above.

Bryans will be onstage this weekend with the Parachute Club, reunited for a celebration of the Queen Street West scene of the late '70s and early '80s, a brief but fertile period of creativity centred on a handful of clubs, theatre spaces, restaurants and art galleries.

The band, best known for their 1983 hit single Rise Up, were at the centre of a scene that included everything from hard-edged punk groups to reggae bands, experimental outfits, and truly unclassifiable entities such as singer Mary-Margaret O'Hara, who'll be playing on the same stage as Bryans and his band, alongside other Queen West veterans such as the B-Girls, Johnny & The G-Rays, Mojah and Micah Barnes.

"I kind of grew up in the place," Bryans recalls. "I had a set of drums that I'd push up and down Queen, from the Cameron to the Horseshoe to the Rivoli to the Black Bull, I'd have them on wheels and push them from one place to another. Everybody was playing with everybody; it was like a little laboratory. I ended up being an actor with Passe Muraille. When I was in The Government with Andy (Patterson), I got involved with video projections and I got involved with Deanne Taylor, collaborated with her on a couple of projects at the Cameron. I kind of learned about art as opposed to just being a musician. When I entered the Queen Street scene, I was just a musician with an open mind, but I learned a lot about art and media by the time I went through it, and the Parachute Club were really a product of that."

At around the same time, Dan Zanes was playing in the Del Fuegos, a Boston-based roots rock band, but he's gotten acclaim — and a Grammy — with Dan Zanes And Friends, his new family-friendly musical outfit. He's bringing their new Latin-drenched album iNUEVA YORK! to Luminato for a week-long artistic residency culminating in two concerts next Saturday.

"In some ways, starting in with family music was a change for the better," Zanes says from his home in New York, looking back at his move into what he calls "all-ages music. "And in some ways just a continuation of what I'd been doing. Music is such a social activity — that's what I loved about rock and roll. Rock and roll was fun for me when it was social — everybody was in it together, we didn't even think it was a show unless people danced."

"A lot of that is the same these days, although the family audiences are much wilder and looser — they're like everything I wanted grownups to be, and that's because young people really set the tone. When people ask me what the audiences are like now, I can sum it up in one sentence, it's that we have wild dance parties before lunchtime."

Luminato runs today until June 15.

Arts affair rules weekend

Listings HERE IS a quick rundown of some of the things you can do and see on this opening weekend of Luminato.

For full information and updates, visit luminato.com.

STREETSCAPE Parts of the city are transformed into outdoor galleries with the help of street artists, wall-painters and multimedia creators. The first area to be "redecorated" is Sam Pollock Square at Brookfield Place (181 Bay St.); it's open 24 hours from June 6-15. The Drake Hotel (1150 Queen St. W.) gets involved with ReSurface, featuring live graffiti art, break dancing and music in the alley. Tomorrow from noon-7 p.m. (free events).

GREEN FLAG SONG Check out an exhibit of singer-songwriter Joni Mitchell's mixed-media canvases. Mitchell's images, described as narratives on the history of war and revolution, were captured from the screen of a dying TV then transformed into Mitchell's own vision of our world. On display today and tomorrow, 11 a.m.-9 p.m., Sun. noon-6 p.m.; continues to Jun. 15 (free event). CTV Queen St. (277 Queen St. W.).

LUMINATO FIRST NIGHT Here's where things really light up. Yonge-Dundas Square is the place to be with an opening night concert featuring the Count Basie Orchestra and 14-year-old jazz singer Nikki Yanofsky. Today from 6:30 p.m.-11 p.m. (free event).

BLACK WATCH The National Theatre of Scotland presents this work based on playwright Gregory Burke's interviews with former soldiers. It takes the audience from a pub in Scotland to the desert south of Baghdad. Today at 7:30 p.m., continues to June 15 ($46 at 416-872-1111). Varsity Arena (275 Bloor St. W.).

Ashley MacIsaac will fiddle with tunes in the Scottish Music Festival, part of Luminato, today from 1:30-11 p.m. at Yonge-Dundas Square.

MOZART DANCES Mark Morris Dance Group offers an evening-long program of dance with pieces inspired by three of Mozart's works for piano and orchestra. Today at 7:30 p.m., tomorrow at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. ($50-$70 at 416-872-1111). MacMillan Theatre (80 Queen's Park).

SANCTUARY SONG Blending opera, dance and theatre together, the piece, based on a true story, follows an elephant on her way to a sanctuary in the hills of Tennessee. Today at 7 p.m., continues to June 14 ($25/$15 at 416-872-1111). Berkeley Street Theatre, 26 Berkeley St.

BLiNK Soulpepper Academy's collective work was inspired by the real life accounts of photojournalists covering wars abroad and the turmoil that follows them back home. Today at 8:30 p.m., continues to June 15 ($25 at 416-872-1111). Young Centre for the Performing Arts (55 Mill St., Bldg. 49).

QUEEN STREET CELEBRATION Last year Luminato looked at Yorkville's Summer Of Love; this year the focus is on Queen West of the mid-'80s. Listen to live music from Johnny & the G-Rays, The "B" Girls, The Parachute Club and others. There's also a display of period artefacts and photos. Tomorrow from noon-10 p.m. at Ontario College of Art (100 McCaul St.) and from 1:30 p.m.-6 p.m. at Grange Park (free event).

ONE ON ONE: LUMINATO FUNK FESTIVAL Get funky with an all day program featuring music from James Brown's Soul Generals and Morris Day and the Time. Tomorrow from 1 p.m.-11 p.m. (free event). Nathan Phillips Square, Queen & Bay Sts.

SCOTTISH MUSIC FESTIVAL Things get Celtic with performances from the Barra MacNeils, Ashley MacIsaac, Stuart Cameron, LAU and Sierra Noble. You can also take part in a Scottish square dance. Today from 1:30 p.m.-11 p.m. (free event). Yonge-Dundas Square.

THE ECSTASY OF RITA JOE George Ryga's landmark drama — one of the first in Canada to tackle issues facing Native peoples — celebrates its 40th anniversary with a special staged reading. Sunday at 2 p.m. ($25 at 416-872-1111). Factory Theatre (125 Bathurst St.).

A CELEBRATION OF ISAAC BASHEVIS SINGER Authors David Bezmozgis and Dara Horn pay tribute to the Nobel Prize-winning author and his literary legacy. Sunday at 3 p.m. ($10 at T.O. TIX in Yonge-Dundas Square). Miles Nadal JCC's Al Green Theatre, 750 Spadina Ave.

Wine bar raises glass to dates

THE PULSE
CHRIS ATCHISON
chris.atchison@metronews.ca

Ambience: Swing by Tappo on a Thursday night and you'll be greeted by a small army of power suit-clad movers and shakers holding up the bar either before or after dinner.

This is very much a trendy after-work wine and cocktail destination, particularly in the spring and summer months when Torontonians seem to rediscover The Distillery District and make the week-night and weekend trek there in droves.

The bar area is fairly tight and the table service can be glacial to say the least, but most patrons seem far more concerned with networking and bragging about the day's big stock trade than prompt delivery of their drinks.

Crowd: Expect to find mainly 30- and 40-somethings after work on Thursday and Friday nights, while local residents of the Distillery District, as well as smart people on dates looking to take advantage of the district's romantic vibe, round out the clientele throughout the week.

Dress code: Attire ranges from well-tailored suits to jeans and casual wear. Dressing somewhere in the middle is appropriate.

Will I get lucky? You have a solid shot — nothing says "desperately-looking-to-score" like a tipsy, Bay Street financier at 8:30 on a Thursday evening.

Should I dance on the bar? Not a chance.

Best reason to pay a visit: There are few better places to take a date — that includes date nights, for those of us in relationships — in this city than the Distillery District.

Cocktail du jour: As you might expect, the varied selection of wines are the most popular items on the beverage menu. Prices are fairly reasonable so don't let the corporate crowd intimidate you — Tappo isn't cheap, but a few glasses of wine probably won't crush your budget.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES | March 21-April 20
Think for a long time before lending something. You'll have to pay for causing a problem. Do some chatting with an intriguing stranger.

TAURUS | April 21-May 21
Don't try to hide something special. You really need to get a wonderful break. Lend someone a hand in a stupid situation.

GEMINI | May 22-June 21
An informal event will take place. Provide a secure place for a woman. A man is embarrassed by his thoughts.

CANCER | June 22-July 22
Unfair money luck causes you to counsel patience. It's an excellent day to be with strangers. Make points with a dramatic person.

LEO | July 23-Aug. 23
You can expect credit to come soon. Avoid taking advantage of a gossip queen. Pamper yourself with an amusing purchase.

VIRGO | Aug. 24-Sept. 22
Get some new clothes at a discount. You'll need help with some funny feelings. A late night troublemaker will ruin a satisfying sleep.

LIBRA | Sep. 23-Oct. 23
A shrill person does not appeal to you. Talking with a sensitive individual will help you. A special buddy needs a treat.

SCORPIO | Oct. 24- Nov. 22
A delay is due to mischief. The knocking at a door heralds a frustrating situation. Strangers will cause melancholy when visiting.

SAGITTARIUS | Nov. 23- Dec. 21
You'll get an offer that is hard to refuse. Don't close the door on a hopeless case. You'll sigh with relief when a message is funny.

CAPRICORN | Dec. 22-Jan. 20
A woman has news about a secret wish. Don't expose the error of someone's ways. You are embarrassed on someone's behalf.

AQUARIUS | Jan. 21-Feb. 18
A lover will give a gift of happiness. Someone will surprise you by going for broke. Don't get bogged down while walking near trees.

PISCES | Feb. 19-Mar. 20
A self-indulgent woman is onto game-playing. Joker's escapades will go over well. Your mood will be taken seriously.

Jessica's dad behind split: Report

Singer Jessica Simpson's father Joe has brought her relationship with football player Tony Romo to the brink and was the main source behind their split in May, usmagazine.com reports.

A source told Us Joe asked Romo, 28, to drop his agent so he could take over his NFL career and $67.5-million US contract.

He even offered to broker a deal to sell his engagement and wedding to a magazine should Romo and Jessica, 27, get engaged.

"'If you guys have a marriage, I can do the same (sell it) that I did with Ashlee,'" a source quoted Joe as saying.

As tension grew, the Dallas Cowboys quarterback reportedly gave Jessica an ultimatum: Tell dad to back off.

When asked for comment by Us, Joe defended himself, telling Us, "It's unfair to criticize me for what every manager does for his or her clients."

Charlize talks marriage

Charlize Theron has never yearned to get married, and insists she has no plans to tie the knot with boyfriend of seven years Stuart Townsend, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The couple has been subject to numerous marriage rumours throughout their long romance, but maintain they are as close and committed as any married couple, and have no plans to change their situation.

The actress tells the July issue of Glamour magazine, "Even when I was a little girl I never dreamed of the white dress and all of that. I want to be clear: I am not judgmental about marriage. I am judgmental about how our government doesn't want to see the reality of gay and lesbian marriages."

Married or not, Theron insists maintaining a long relationship requires effort. The Oscar winner adds, "I think if you are in a one or two-year relationship, love is enough. You can thrive on that. When you hit years three and four, you realize that if you're going to live with somebody ... you have to be nurtured emotionally and spiritually, and you have to be intrigued.

Because if that intrigue runs out, you're not going to want to go home anymore."

Jim credits boy with love lesson

Actor Jim Carrey credits the autistic son of his girlfriend Jenny McCarthy with teaching him how to love, imdb.com reports.

Carrey spoke out during a march in Washington D.C. on Wednesday, to raise awareness of the presence of toxins in vaccines, which McCarthy claims was the cause of five-year-old son Evan's condition.

Carrey, also accompanied by his 20-year-old daughter, Jane, said, "He taught me how to love. And without Evan I might never have seen the greatness of Jenny's spirit. (Jenny is) the source of all that is good (in my life)."

Liv may want hubby back

Five weeks after announcing her separation from rocker Royston Langdon, actress Liv Tyler is having second thoughts, starmagazine.com reports.

Tyler "is desperately sad and thinks she may have made the mistake of a lifetime," says a source. "She now feels that no matter how bad it was, they can still make it work."

After hearing from pals like actress Gwyneth Paltrow that marriage requires hard work, Liv, 30, has tried to reach out to the Langdon, 36, to see if they can patch things up. So far, no luck.

The couple, who wed in 2003, have a son, Milo, 3.

Kate OKs young Beckham for daughter

Actress Kate Beckinsale has said she's not looking forward to her nine-year-old daughter Lily discovering boys – but she'd be more willing to accept a certain Beckham into the family, fametastic.co.uk reports.

"I am dreading the day Lily brings home a boy," Beckinsale said. "But she and the Beckham boys get on really well. So if she did have to have a boyfriend, then I suppose Brooklyn (also nine) would get my seal of approval!"

Beckinsale and her husband Len Wiseman have been spotted socializing with soccer star David Beckham and his wife, former Spice Girl Victoria Beckham, on a number of occasions over the past few months.

"They've got a lot in common – ex-pats in L.A. with kids the same age – and feel they can really relax together," a source close to both families said.

My wealth, my business: Mary-Kate

Actress Mary-Kate Olsen has hit out at people who question her about the Olsen twins' fortune – insisting her personal wealth is of no concern to the outside world, imdb.com reports.

The 21-year-old began acting as a baby, appearing in the 1980s show Full House alongside twin sister Ashley.

And the pair, who have gone on to launch a hugely lucrative merchandising empire, are estimated to be worth more than $100 million US.

But when questioned on her position as a wealthy young woman, Mary-Kate insists it shouldn't be of interest to anyone.

"It's nobody's business if I am or I'm not (rich)," she told Us magazine.

Olsen doubts she would have considered a career in show business had she not started out as a youngster, insisting she is only acting now because it is all she has ever known.

"I grew up in it," she said. "It wasn't something that I aspired to. It's just something I knew. For me, I just worked. I had a job. I've had a job for 21 years."

Antics embarrass Lily

Pop star Lily Allen is ashamed of her behaviour at a London awards show on Tuesday, insisting she feels "awful" about her raucous actions, female-first.co.uk reports.

The singer, 23, turned heads with her bright pink hair at the Glamour Women of the Year Awards, where she was presented with the Editor's Special Award.

She was pictured at the start of the night looking elegant in a pale pink off-the-shoulder dress, but by the end of the night, Allen was allegedly so drunk she had to be carried to her car.

Writing on her MySpace blog, she adds, "Last time I wrote (sic) here, I was defending my honour and dignity, explaining my innocence and also outrage at the press for insinuating my behaviour was embarrassing. This time I'm putting my hands up, I got very drunk last night, too drunk. It's not cool getting that drunk, I feel awful ..."

And, although Allen admits she had a good time, Allen also makes sure to warn others about the dangers of drinking: "Kids, drink responsibly or you'll end up looking like this, not pretty!"

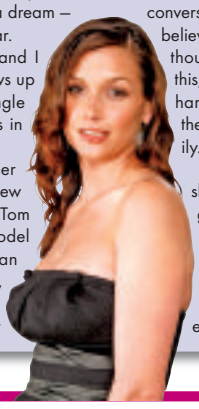
Bridget reveals heartache

For Bridget Moynahan, bringing her newborn son home alone last year was "frightening" – and far from a dream – she reveals to Harper's Bazaar.



"I'm not sure anyone – and I could be wrong in this – grows up thinking, 'I want to be a single mom,' " Moynahan, 37, says in the magazine's July issue.

Shortly after the end of her three-year relationship with New England Patriots quarterback Tom Brady – who is dating model Gisele Bündchen – Moynahan announced her pregnancy, People.com reports.

"When you're suddenly pregnant and no one is standing by your side, even if you're in your 30s, it's a hard conversation. I'm a traditional girl, and I believe in marriage, and I just always thought that's the way I'd be doing this," she says. "For a moment, it was hard for me to accept that this was the way I was going to have a family."

She gave birth to John – whom she gave her last name – last August. "I walk in and just started sobbing," she says of coming home alone with her son. "All of a sudden, you have this newborn you have no training for. It's frightening."
